

CZARINA SAVES CROWN JEWELS

Smuggled Out of Country by a Near Relative.

When Revolution Began to Rock Country Empress Summoned Crown Jewels, Had Gems Taken From Settings and Replaced by Paste—Emissary Carries Them to Czarina's Paternal Kinsmen in Germany.

How the Russian crown jewels were smuggled out of the empire and saved to the house of Romanoff from the pillage and confiscation of the revolution is a romantic story told in Chicago by a Russian of noble blood who escaped from his native country by way of Vladivostok and recently arrived in the United States.

The Imperial jewels are among the world's largest collections. In diamonds and pearls alone they are worth many millions of dollars. Diamonds and pearls are now regarded as among the safest means of conserving money. The war has more than doubled their value and jewelers declare their price will increase for several years after the war. So when the revolution began to rock the Russian throne, the czar's first thought was to save the crown jewels to insure her family against the threatened period of misfortune.

Removed in Secret.

She summoned the crown jeweler secretly by night to the palace of Tzarke-Selo. There under her personal supervision he removed all the gems from their settings and replaced them with paste imitations. Then employing one of her near relatives as an emissary, she smuggled the collection out of Petrograd on a naval vessel. Through Sweden and Denmark the special messenger finally made his way into Germany and delivered the jewels to the czar's paternal kinsmen in Hesse-Darmstadt. There the gems now repose in safety in the treasury of the principality.

For a long time no one in Russia not in the secret knew the gems had been removed. The Imperial collection ostensibly continued to be kept on public display under military guard in Tzarke-Selo palace. Thousands viewed it and no one suspected that the resplendent ornaments were mere worthless imitations.

Some Notable Gems.

Among the salvaged jewels were the famous black pearl of Catherine II and the historic Orloff diamond weighing 194 1/2 carats. The Orloff was stolen originally by a soldier from the eye of a statue of Buddha in a Hindu temple. It was bought by Prince Orloff, one of the favorites of Catherine II, for half a million dollars and presented to the empress. The Orloff and the Kohinoor, which blazes in the crown of England, are thought to be parts of the Great Mogul, a magnificent Indian diamond which disappeared mysteriously in the seventeenth century.

Czar Nicholas is dead, but if the czar's fate, as has been reported, she may yet reclaim the Imperial jewels and with them re-establish the fortunes of her family.

SHE ROLLS BARREL

With a Band Parade Woman Pays Last War Bet.

Three hundred citizens of Beavertown, Pa., two-thirds of them women, marched eight miles the other day from Beavertown to Middleburg, to celebrate the armistice and accompany Mrs. Nell Feese, a woman fifty years of age, who rolled a barrel the entire distance in payment of a wager made with her husband that the war would not end before Christmas.

Headed by the Thoxelville band and met by a committee of Middleburg citizens and the Red Cross, the parade marched into the county seat at three o'clock, having walked the distance in two and a half hours. Mrs. Feese wore across her breast a banner inscribed with the words: "United We Stand." She has a son, J. Blaine Feese, in France. A large number of trucks and automobiles were brought down to take the party back to Beavertown.

TEUTENBERG TOO TEUTON

"Now You're Tootin," Says Judge As Woman Asks New Name.

"Now you're tootin'," remarked Judge Calvin Hall in the superior court at Seattle when Mrs. Lillian M. Teutenberg appeared in court and asked to have her name changed because she said it was too Teutonic. She was given the name West. She has a son, Harry West, with the American army in France. She said she was married in Chicago in 1908 and her soldier son was the result of that union. She obtained a divorce from Teutenberg in 1905.

Chepe Wood at 105.

John Reimann of Goffstown, N. H., aged one hundred and five years, celebrated his birthday by chopping wood and doing other chores around the home of his daughter. Mr. Reimann has his birth certificate showing he was born in Canada on November 14, 1812.

URGE IMPORTANCE OF SAVING WASTE PAPER

Every Household Is Asked to Save Old Paper, Rags, Leather and Rubber.

Waste paper of all kinds can be used in making new paper or paper boards. All the chipboard from which ordinary pasteboard boxes are made is manufactured out of mixed waste paper scraps gathered up in the stores and other places. Newspapers make a better grade of board known as newsboard. Strong wrapping paper mixed with sulphate pulp are used in making test, or strong chipboard, from which shipping containers of all kinds are made. These are taking the places of wooden boxes, thereby conserving the forests.

The finer grades of waste paper such as old magazines, books, stationery, etc., are sorted out, de-inked, and used again in making books, writing and other grades of paper. In making boards and ledgers, etc., a considerable quantity of rags are necessary, the supply of which is becoming very scarce. It is imperative, therefore, that all rags be saved. Every household should save all of its old paper and rags, as well as leather, rubber, etc., and dispose of them to the schoolchildren, Salvation army, junkmen or other quarters so that the supply may be kept adequate to meet the demands of the government and other essential uses.

HAPPINESS IN BEING BUSY

An Aged Man Gives His Prescription for a Long Life.

Early to bed and early to rise, and enough work to keep a man contented, is the prescription for a long life given by Frederick J. Layton of Philadelphia, who celebrated his one hundredth birthday the other day.

One hundred years ago Frederick Layton was born in Nottingham, England. A horse trader by profession, he came to this country when he was forty years old and followed this work in St. Louis, Delaware, and finally in Philadelphia, where he has lived at one address for more than forty years.

"I like to be busy," is his invariable reply to his protesting grandchildren. All day at his home, where he lives with his daughter, his descendants and residents of the neighborhood and his friends called to give him a birthday greeting. He has 68 grandchildren and great-grandchildren, the youngest of whom is Charles Quarles, five weeks old, son of a soldier in France.

START A BAT ROOST

They Will Combat Mosquitoes That Breed Malaria.

Start a bat roost and help rid the country of disease, is the admonition of Dr. Charles A. Campbell of San Antonio, who recently attended the Southwestern Medical association meeting at Dallas.

Malaria, he says, is one of man's worst enemies, and the lowly bat as a combatant of the disease is highly valuable. Doctor Campbell has worked on his theory for 17 years, perfecting it scientifically only during the war.

"The malaria mosquito and the bat are both nocturnal and the mosquito furnishes 90 per cent of the bat's food," he said. "All that is needed to combat the mosquito and resultant malaria is to furnish the bat with a home. A roost similar to the method in keeping bees in one's back yard will suffice, for the bat knows its home and will return after a night's foraging. In my back yard I have many of these sanitary workers."

HORSEWHIPPED BY WOMEN

Punished Man Who Was Accused of Blacking Girl's Eye.

Accused of having struck his daughter Edith, 15 years of age, in the eye, Edwin Brooks, forty-six years of age, of Rockford, Mich., was escorted to the public square in Rockford, near here, stripped of his coat and vest and horsewhipped by a dozen women, while a crowd estimated at 300, including men, women and children, jeered and urged the women on.

Brooks, badly bruised, has consulted county officers. He declares he merely attempted to box his daughter's ears when she was impudent to her step-mother and that when the girl threw up her hand it deflected the blow to her eye.

KNITTING ACTIVITIES COVER THREE WARS

Aged Ohio Man Has Made Many Socks and Sweaters for Soldiers.

"Knitting is easier today than it was when I was a boy, and I guess I've improved some in my work, too," is the modest way in which George E. Hill of Dayton, O., comments on his knitting record, which embraces three wars. During the European war, after American intervention, the Dayton chapter of the American Red Cross delivered yarn to him in volume of 20 hanks at a time. "Those who knit will appreciate what this means—what a tremendous task confronts the knitter. Undaunted, Mr. Hill 'carried on.' When he reached his hundredth pair he knitted appropriate designs into the socks and sent them to the president of the United States, who is also president of the American Red Cross. General Pershing, he says, will get the two hundredth pair, properly decorated.

When a boy Mr. Hill knitted for the soldiers of the Civil war. During the Spanish-American war he knitted garments for Red Cross distribution. Long before America declared war against Germany he resumed his knitting activities on behalf of the allies.

GEORGE E. HILL

redoubling his efforts when the youth of our land was called into service. He is indefatigable in his work. In November when the Dayton chapter of the American Red Cross was asked to furnish 500 sweaters for nurses, Mr. Hill completed two in six days, remarking when he delivered them: "I can finish two of them in five days if I'm not interrupted too much."

Although his hair is white with the snows of many years, Mr. Hill's heart is delightfully youthful. He works at his regular employment in the commercial world from seven to five o'clock every week day, and does his knitting in his leisure hours, often arising at three o'clock in the morning to knit a sock before breakfast, as it were. He has made a specialty of knitting two socks simultaneously with one pair of knitting needles.

SHADE TREE MEMORIALS

Proposal to Set Them Out for Soldiers and Sailors Who Have Died.

Shade trees as memorials to Milwaukee soldiers and sailors who lost their lives in the war is the plan which is under consideration by the parks and parkways committee of the civic commission. A tree for each man would be planted and each would bear the name of the man whom it commemorates and other information about him.

The committee is considering two places for the trees. One plan provides for co-operation with other localities to have all such trees planted along the Lincoln highway. The other plan is to make the project purely local and place the trees along a route connecting the city parks.

"The trees would be of various kinds," said John D. Ball of the civic commission. "They would be planted in groups at points where it is desirable to gain the view of the passer by."

TO BE LASTING MEMORIAL

Sweetheart's Monument at Camp Devens to Be Permanent.

Sweetheart's monument, built with stones brought to Camp Devens, Mass., by the sweethearts of the soldiers of the Seventy-sixth division, is to remain a lasting memorial. A bronze tablet has been placed on the monument. The tablet has a winged American eagle at the top. Under the eagle is the following: "To the citizens of the United States who at the call of humanity laid aside their vocations to become soldiers in the Grand Army of Liberty this memorial is dedicated, 1918."

Stags Boston Tea Party.

Manitowoc, Wis., staged a "Boston tea party" that was not on the schedule when two box cars loaded with tea were backed off the Soo ship and plunged into Lake Michigan. The contents of the cars were valued at several thousand dollars and will probably be a total loss.

WILL HELP POLICE OCCUPIED TERRITORY

Col. Arthur Woods, who was formerly police commissioner of New York and is now a member of General Pershing's staff, will instruct American and allied military police in the value of the famous "kid 'em along" slogan of the New York police. Colonel Woods has found in his experience as police commissioner that this is the best policy with which to handle a crowd. This is the policy that he will use in the territory that will be occupied by our troops.

TO PREVENT FISH FROM ENTERING WRONG RIVER

Thousands of Dollars to Be Saved by Oklahoma Man's Invention.

Thousands of dollars annually will be saved, it is expected, in the Pacific Northwest fisheries industry by a device invented by Henry T. Burkey of Oklahoma. The invention is an electric fish stop.

Because there has been no efficient way to prevent fish following wrong streams, hatcheries have lost thousands of dollars every year. Nets across the mouths of rivers have proved costly and inefficient. Keeping fish away from intake and irrigation ditches is a difficult problem solved by the electric fish stop.

The invention, which establishes electric fields of graduated voltage across a stream, is said to be cheaper than any device so far conceived, as the power is furnished by the force of the current turning a turbine dynamo.

A field of 25 volts is located farthest down stream and small fish coming in contact with the electric current are turned back into the main current of the river. Fields of increasing voltage act on fish of larger size. Fish are extremely sensitive to electric currents and the water greatly increases the conductivity of the electricity.

When Burkey has completed arrangements with the Northwest fisheries he will go to Alaska at the invitation of the Alaska bureau of fisheries to demonstrate his electric stop in the North.

COBBLED MANY YEARS

Man Has Stuck to His Last for a Long Time.

George H. Peterson, who has worked on a cobbler's bench for half a century, came to Marinette, Wis., in April, 1874, from Schleswig, Denmark, where he was born. He has earned his own living since he was eleven, and reached America when nineteen. He has been a Sunday school teacher of the Danish Lutheran church since early manhood and is devoted to children, who are his special delight. His shop is frequently visited by young people eager to watch him make old shoes look like new. In the quarter of a century that he has sat upon the same bench the leather seat has been replaced but once.

HOE BETTER THAN GUN

Shots From a State Ranger's Revolver Had No Effect Upon Bear.

Even as the pen is mightier than the sword, so is the grubbing hoe mightier than the gun.

Citizens at Detroit, Ore., have demonstrated this. A 200-pound bear dropped in on a war garden, driven from the woods by a forest fire.

A state ranger emptied his revolver at the bear, but bruins didn't seem to mind it at all. Then the war gardener walloped the bear with a grubbing hoe and the beastie keeled over, turned up his toes and "quit."

Indian Land on Sale.

Four hundred and forty-five thousand acres of coal and 45,000 acres of coal lands in Oklahoma, owned by the Chickasaw and Choctaw Indians, will be sold at public auction. This marks the final windup of the government supervision over the 53 separate tribes of Indians still residing in the state. The affairs of the Cherokee Indians already have been closed, as well as the Creeks.
